Members of the old school days under Miss Mae McCallan were recalled on Monday when many of her former pupils gathered in the little building on East High street to hold an informal reunion and to pay tribute to the woman who had been so many of the young people of Gettysburg received their early education.

Following Miss McCallan's old custom, the "school" was called together on Monday by the ringing of a bell. Miss McCallan, who had returned this function and then C. S. Duncan, following a daily plan of his school days, threw a brick against the shutter and quickly dashed in to proceed to the exercises. It is possibly they have been the girls and boys.

As chairman of the committee ar-opened the session by welcoming all the former pupils. David McCullan recognized the guests and gave a historical sketch of the school and of Miss Mary McCellan was read by John Hord and she presented it. The sketch appears below.

Donald P. McPherson, Esq. read a large number of letters from parents who were present at the morning gathering came to a close with a group picture taken in front of the old school.

In the afternoon at two o'clock all went to the cemetery where a brief service was held at Miss McCellan's grave. It consisted of the Lord's Prayer and reading of the Epistle of Scripture by James McConaghy.

In the evening an informal recognition took place at the home of Mrs. Ruthing on Centre street.

RESORT NEWS

Interesting Statistics Concerning Gettysburg Given by new Directory.

As an example in inaccuracy in detail a summer resort directory, just issued as a supplement to one of the ports of that sort. In its tabulation of Gettysburg's hotels it blames the Globe for having accommodations for 100 guests. The "Hawthorne Flat" is ably one of the ethereal institutions that are entertaining the hordes of tourists persuaded to "see America first" by the war in Europe. Further examination develops that the Eagle Hotel is located one-fourth mile, while the City Hotel is one-eighth mile from the nearest railway station, and both these hotels are one mile from the nearest water.

LITTLE TROUBLE ABOUT BAGGAGE GETTYSBURG HAS BEST ATTRACTION

Agents of Gettysburg Station do not have the inconvenience they anticipated. Nor do Declara for State Trips.

Although it has been in operation less than three weeks, the traveling public here is rapidly becoming acquainted to the Gettysburg baggage law, which is really far more convenient than the law in force in other cities.

Recently instructions have been issued by the Interstate Commerce Commission for the collection of baggage fees. These instructions are based upon the fact that the law in force in other cities is such that the traveling public is not able to pay the baggage fee in advance, and the law in force in this city is such that the traveling public is able to pay the baggage fee in advance.

The traveling public, it is said, is not able to pay the baggage fee in advance, and the law in force in this city is such that the traveling public is able to pay the baggage fee in advance.

FORMERLY IN LINCOLN WAY

Standards Imposed upon the Lincoln Highway, traversing several states, is under as many different systems of law as the states it crosses. Not only is this true as laws but each of the 400 cities and hamlets through it passes has either a disad- vantage or an advantage over the ordinance from the others or none at all. The driver crossing the Lincoln way from coast to coast can not count on finding any one ordinances, a traffic act, wholesale traffic ordinances and provisions covering country and city, is adopted and approved.

Each state would appoint a committee on this subject and draft a state law of the road in such a way as to fit each of the several legal systems, and then by conference with the authorities of other states, seek desired uniformity of rules, there be no doubt in the minds of those concerned the requirements should be obeyed.
